Description:

Common Interest - Religion & Spirituality

In the first centuries of the Christian era, Christians held a variety of beliefs concerning the nature of Jesus. In 325 CE, however, the Council of Nicea promulgated the doctrine of the Trinity--God as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost--and denounced all those who believed differently as heretics.

Historic Unitarians believed in the moral distinction, but not the deity, of Jesus, and rejected the concept of the trinity. Unitarians are often historically characterized as free thinkers and as spiritual reformers who have seen the "Reformation process" as incomplete, unfinished and still ongoing.

Historic Universalists were also vilified and persecuted as heretics for their refusal to accept that a truly loving and compassionate God would condemn any of "his own children" to eternal punishment, no matter what their "sin" or their personal religious beliefs. Their "gospel" of love, brotherhood and inclusion held that all of us-- as "children of a common creation" -- are born with inherent worth and are universally connected (...sharing even a common destiny).

The two churches merged in 1961, recognizing their common religious purposes and priorities in an ever-shrinking, deeply divided world. True to both our movement's "Radical Reformation" roots and an "Age of Enlightenment" spirit of critical thinking and questioning, today's Unitarian Universalists continue to insist that the religious quest is both intensely personal and still unfolding. We continue to believe that people should be free to think for themselves and to ask their own heartfelt questions...to even express their own honest doubts without fear of condemnation. We (respectfully) hold that "ultimate truth and meaning" are most likely to be discovered in utmost freedom and humble, open inquiry.

Our paths are many, and our truth-sources as wide as the universe...from the sacred literature of the world's many religions, the discoveries of science, the first-hand witness of our life-experiences, and the deepest promptings of the inner voice of conscience. We walk together, not in "conformity to the letter" of an unquestionable dogma, but in a "unity of spirit" -- of shared ethical concern and commitment to service, grounded in mutual respect and freedom. We share an approach to religion that strives to be more loving, more compassionate, justice-seeking, life-celebrating, boldly questioning...and (of course) never-settled.

-- WELCOME EVERYBODY! Whether you're a longtime UU, a "kindred spirit," or just plain curious, we're delighted to have you with us! Here are several links that may be of interest to you. (These are parts of another UU message board that one of the administrators here also manages):

Helen Hello all...
I have a friend who is a writer, and she is looking for suggestions for Canadian Peace Activists to interview. She is looking for women 65+, 40's and 50's. She mentioned in particular that she would like to interview a Raging Granny, but she doesn't know any... anyone can feel free to contact me if they are willing to be interviewed. If you know someone not on facebook, please make sure you get their permission before passing on any contact info.
THANKS!
